

Community interest requirements, news programming requirements, prohibitions against cross-channel ownership and conglomerate ownership have all served Americans well. I would hope the FCC might take a more aggressive and more interventionist stand than it has in recent years. Few could argue that the quality of television and radio content in America has improved. Please, maintain and increase the restrictions on media corporations.